The Story

Hi, everyone. This is a demo recording for the app, but the actual recipe that I'm going to talk about is real, just to show an example. So this is about Dad's famous banana pancakes, Sunday morning banana pancakes.

As most families with kids are probably aware, it's sometimes quite hard to get any kind of fruit intake into our kids. So this was really a simple recipe that we came up with to, one, get some fruit into the kids, but also turn it into more of a fun Sunday morning activity.

These days, we can't even get the kids out of bed, let alone help us with making pancakes. But nevertheless, it's still a fun thing we like to do on Sunday mornings. So that's the story behind this.

What You'll Need

Here's everything you'll need to get started:

- 2 bananas
- 2 eggs
- Self-raising flour
- Raw sugar
- Butter
- Milk
- Berries
- Honey
- Yogurt

How to Make It

Follow these steps to bring it all together:

Making the Batter

1. Take bananas, chop them into pieces, and pop them into the blender. I use a NutriBullet, which works quite well.
2. Crack in the eggs, add maybe one cup of self-raising flour, a teaspoon of brown sugar, and a bit of butter.
3. Top it up with milk and blend it up to create your mixture.
4. If the batter is too runny, add a bit more flour, and if it's too thick, add a bit more milk. Just get it right.

Cooking the Pancakes

1. Get a frying pan, make sure it's evenly heated, and add a bit of butter onto the pan.
2. Put in some of the mixture, close the lid on top of it to let it steam a bit, and let it fry for maybe two minutes on medium heat.
3. When you start seeing some bubbles forming on the top, that's your sign to flip the pancake.
4. Before you flip the pancake, put another bit of butter on top of the pancake so that side doesn't get burnt.
5. Flip it, and don't cover it after you flip it because it kind of gets a bit soggy then.
6. Let it fry for maybe another minute and then the pancakes are ready.

Tips & Variations

Here are some tips for you:

Condiment Ideas:

Our kids absolutely love Nutella with some honey on it.

You could also try a dollop of yogurt with some berries and then drizzle a bit of honey on top.

They're also pretty happy with chocolate flakes.

It really comes down to your imagination, but there are plenty of options to make it even more enticing!

Final Thoughts

So yeah, that's a pretty simple recipe. This used to be a pretty fun Sunday tradition, like I mentioned at the beginning. I used to come down and pop on Banana Pancakes by Jack Johnson on Spotify, and the kids used to help me out. So yeah, it was a pretty fun Sunday family tradition.

I hope you guys enjoy it. Now, in closing, I will say that this is just a little example demo of how to create a recipe on the app. And if my kids actually see this someday, well, you know, hopefully they'll remember these things as well. That's the main idea of the app.
